

Acer rubrum 'Bowhall'

This is a compact, narrow growing cultivar with mid to dark green foliage. Leaves have three-to-five-lobed leaves with light green petioles and veins, lighter grey-green on the underside. Foliage turns yellowish-red to orange in autumn.

This tree is excellent as a street tree or planted in gardens where lateral space is limited. Can screen if you have the space.

This selection can tolerate full sun and part shade and prefers a well drained soil. It is also tolerant of sandy, loam or clay soils.
