

Schinus areira '(syn. Schinus molle)'

PEPPERCORN TREE, PINK PEPPERCORN

This is an evergreen tree with a graceful weeping habit and aromatic, dark green feathery foliage. Small, white flowers are produced in long panicles at the ends of branches, followed by reddish fruit which hang like strings of beads throughout the tree. Rough grey bark covers the trunk and branches which, with age develop wonderfully gnarled trunks and burls adding to its architectural beauty.

Growing to 15 metres it is an ideal tree for street plantings and parks. Beautiful specimen tree.

Tolerates drought conditions and extreme heat in most soil conditions.
